The third scene falls fia. The soliloquy of Rosario, and the duet between her and Fernando are unmistakably dull. In these lay the chance for Mr. Granados to compose things that should not soon be forgotten. He missed it.

Recently we have heard many of Mr. Granados's works for the piano, all of them interesting, It is as a composer of music for the piano, probably, that Mr. Granados will find his place. The orchestration of "Goyescas" smacks of the piano. The overture is promising. The inter-

Airmen firing at each other, resulting in the collapse of two of the ships of the clouds; the torpedoing of a cruiser by a submarine, the nand-to-hand fighting of infantry and eavairy, the massive work of the artillery and the noble work of the field hospital corps—all are shown most vividly. Every kind of fighting is shown in every part of the war zone. The management asserts it has chosen the best work of more than eighty war camera men, who must indeed have been daring photographers to take the chances necessary to secure such picceruiting and entraining of the troops hances necessary to secure such pic-
